City Council facing tough environmental issues

Environmental concerns were the theme of Monday night's Lemon Grove City council meeting.

Mayor Dorman proclaimed May 1990 as Water Awareness Month and Warren Buckner, a director of Helix Water District spoke of the importance of water conservation. There has been a 40% reduction in run-off from the Rockies and there was no run-off from Lake Cuyamaca this year, said Buckner. As a result, the San Diego County Water District has recommended a Stage II Water Alert.

The state of San Diego's sewage was also discussed by the Council. Councilmember Brian Cochran serves on the Clean Water Program Governance Advisory Group and asked Andy Konigsberg of DeLoitte & Touche to outline to the Council the various governing options for the metropolitan sewerage system. The Advisory Group and Konigsberg suggested that the best form of governance for the metropolitan sewerage system would be the Special Act District. The Special Act District "can be tailored to be anything and it will have State Legislative representation," said Konigsberg. He added that it would also have flexible financial powers and could issue revenue bonds without public election. The Council agreed that the Special Act District was the most advantageous form of governance and voted to have Cochran represent that position at the next Governance Advisory Group meeting.

As a further effort to promote environmental awareness, the Council passed a resolution recognizing the Anniversary of Earth Day. Jean Davis of the Earth Day Committee commended the Council on its current environmental efforts and recommended steps the City could take such as a comprehensive recycling plan, land use planning and environmental education, to name a few, to promote a cleaner earth.

Finally, the Council voted to loan money to the Redevelopment Agency which has exceeded the budget on two items that have been more costly or more successful than expected. One of the items was the expansion of the commercial rehabilitation program which has attracted several large businesses that will require substantial amounts of assistance to participate in the program. The other item was the cost of the property acquisition for the public parking lot on Lester Avenue.

Easter Bunny and egg hunt thrill youngsters

Story and photos by Lisa Parsons

The Easter Bunny came to Berry Street Park Saturday, covering the grass with jewel colored eggs for Lemon Grove youngsters to find. Hundreds of children under the age of six hunted for eggs and filled their baskets with Easter goodies. The baskets themselves were a spectacle ranging from colorful wicker to stuffed calico bunnys whose tummys formed the bowl of the basket. Many of the children were decked out in their easter finery with bonnets, bow ties and, every now and again, a little mini-easter bunny would hop by clutching a basket.

The Lemon Grove Soroptimists and the Lemon Grove Recreation Department sponsored the egg hunt, with the help of the Lemon Grove School District who colored hundreds of eggs for the children.

There were separate hunts for kids ages 5-6, 3-4 and two and under. For each hunt, there was one special prize egg covered in glitter that entitled the lucky finder to a large Easter basket filled with toys and goodies.

The children were also invited to visit with the Easter Bunny and parents, with their cameras and camcorders, recorded the surprise and delight of their children as they sat on the Easter Bunny's lap and received a lollipop from his helper.

Southland water situation worsens, prospects for future even dimmer

"Everyone living here in San Diego since 1947 has been living on borrowed water." This is the conclusion reached by Bob Freidgen, General Manager of the Helix Water District and the man primarily responsible for making the County Water Authority's Stage II alert a reality in the East County. Pointing to graphs and charts indicating the southland's dwindling water availability, Freidgen predicts that, while San Diego may be only minimally inconvenienced by shortage this summer, the district may be in dire straits within a few years.

"Our water has been coming from sources that, in actuality, are legally designated for Los Angeles and Arizona but have not yet been used by them."

Freidgen explains that the Metropolitan Water District's request for Colorado River water has already been cut 25% from 1.2 to 0.9 million acre-feet and that, as Arizona takes more of its Colorado River entitlement, we will be further cut to the eventual 550 thousand acre-feet that is San Diego's true legal allotment. In addition, it is expected that in the future, Los Angeles will require more of the MWD's water due to the drying up of their primary source in the Owens Valley. A final blow may yet result from Supreme Court hearings of lawsuits by Arizona Indian tribes. Should the tribes win, even more will be diverted from San Diego's Colorado River allotment.

Freidgen added that not enough water was collected in our own reservoirs to offset normal water evaporation - and drought throughout northern California's watersheds bodes ill for our future. Our most immediate concern, according to Freidgen, is the possibility of a long overdue severe summer Santa Ana. "If this occurs," he says, "we're in for a whale of a summer."

One of the local efforts that has some hopeful possibilities has yet to produce results. A five-year cloud seeding program jointly sponsored by the Helix Water District, the City of San Diego and the Sweetwater Authority attempted 26 cloud seeding operations between December 28th and April 4th "without a measurable response." Freidgen feels, however, that it is too early to judge the program's potential. In the past, rain in San Diego has produced an average of 10% of the area's water. Currently that figure has been reduced to 2% due to the drought and it is hoped that future cloud seedings might raise that percentage.

With the County Water authority having called for a Stage II alert at its April 12th meeting, Freidgen expects the Board of the Helix District to comply. In its plans to cut water consumption 10%, the Stage II plan calls for limited lawn watering and auto washing, no washing of paved areas, limited filling of pools and spas, and restaurant drinking water by request only. Freidgen says that he "expects people to respond to this 10% reduction without being hounded." He adds that "There are no water cops," in the Helix District and compliance will rely on meters, district employees and neighbors calls reporting blatant misuse of water. A greater concern, he feels, lies in the continued use of automatic sprinkler systems by condos and businesses.

If agreed to by the Helix board, the Stage II plan is expected to go into effect sometime after May 1st. May is National Water Awareness Month and Bob Freidgen feels that Southern California is long overdue for a full understanding of its threatened water supply. "The water shortage has been gradually closing in on us in Southern California," he says. "Now it's finally our turn."

City Manager Jack Shelver

by Lisa Parsons

The challenge of starting a new city was what first lured City Manager Jack Shelver to Lemon Grove, but he's stayed for the people.

Shelver, who was born in Minot, North Dakota, was introduced to San Diego when he joined the Marine Corps and was stationed at Camp Pendleton during the last year-and-a-half of his tour. He said he became involved in the community through one of his friends and eventually persuaded his mother to move to San Diego. He was scheduled to return to North Dakota to finish his schooling, but at the last minute he decided to stay in San Diego and attend San Diego Junior College. He became very involved with the student government there and after two years he transferred to San Diego State University where he majored in Political Science. "They didn't have a Public Administration major at that time," said Shelver.

He graduated in 1961 and worked for the City of San Diego as an administrative trainee in the personnel department for one year. At the end of that year he heard about a job opening for an assistant to the City Manager in Imperial Beach. "I decided to go down there because I knew I wanted to be a City Manager. I wanted to be involved in city management in a small city where I could see results of what I was doing," he said.

He worked in Imperial Beach for five years, moved to Del Mar and spent five years as City Manager there, and in November of 1977 he took the position of City Manager of Lemon Grove. "It was a very interesting position--and a challenge," said Shelver. "I liked the idea of starting a new city. I'd never done that before--not many City Managers get the chance to."

He said he has difficulty giving an exact description of what a City Manager does, but it is "essentially financial management, preparing the City's budget, making recommendations to the Council and administering the budget."

Shelver said he has been "blessed" with a good City Council for 12 years and that, right from the beginning, it was on the right track. "There were no wild claims or promises made that were going to be difficult of impossible to fulfill," he said. The expectations and campaign of the incorporation committee were reasonable--they wanted recreation, public safety, road work--a lot of little things that aren't really noticeable in the appearance of the community, but that make a difference. These were not exotic changes, but important."

Shelver and his wife, Sandy, live in Lemon Grove where they are both active in the community. She is a travel agent and sings with the Sweet Adelines. The Shelves have two children, a son in the Navy and a daughter who works in a law office in San Francisco.

When Shelver has a little spare time he likes to putter around the yard, travel and camp.

"I'm pleased with the way Lemon Grove is progressing and I'm proud to be a part of it," concluded Shelver.

Drown speaks at VFW to Lemon Grove residents

San Diego County's Assistant Sheriff, Jack Drown, a leading candidate for the office of Sheriff, told a meeting of Lemon Grove citizens Tuesday night, of the challenges and some of the remedies he would utilize if he is elected June 5th.

The meeting was held at the Lemon Grove VFW Post 2082 and was hosted by VFW members Bob and Muriel Nagle.

Drown noted that county demographics are changing rapidly and these changes must be accommodated. "The Asian population will triple in the next ten years and the Hispanic total will double. We've got to find bilingual deputies to properly serve these people," he said.

He added the Hispanic population would top a million by the year 2000.

"One segment of our population, victims, will be utilized," he said. Drown hopes to start a new program where the victims of crimes, who are often brushed aside, will become valuable assets to law enforcement. "Being a victim is a painful experience. Yet their knowledge and interests will be heard and the information used. It will tend to make them feel as appreciated as they should be," he said.

Probably the biggest project facing the Sheriff is to gather leaders of all segments of society into a continuous war on drug abuse, said Drown.

"We are not winning the war now," he said, but there is one small, yet significant, area where there has been some success. The student drug abuse problem has receded slightly. He noted that the Sheriff's school drug program was a factor in the reduction of the school drug abuse problem.

"As Sheriff, I will attempt to involve all levels of our society. Business firms, labor unions, youth groups, churches, the media and clubs will be asked to work together with us for an all out battle against the drug abuse crime. Together, we can turn the problem around," he said.

He also said that drug education would be one of the tools used to impact the drug abuse problem.

Assistant Sheriff Drown is a 20 year veteran of the Sheriff's Department who has risen through the ranks of the 2,200 person organization.

Environmental clock running down

Trying to determine our national environmental report card on Earth Day 1990 is no small task. Reading the local newspapers or watching TV one can become confused by the contradictory directions we appear to be taking. Page 14 in one paper tells us that 1988 saw a record set in the number of American workers exposed to measurable radiation. On pages 20-21 of the same paper a two page ad from the Chemical Manufacturers Association assures us that "over 170 leading chemical companies are saying 'we're responsible.'"

Another page in the same paper raises the spectre of increased L.A. smog in San Diego if the utility merger goes through, while on the same page we're told that water is running low.

We know that in some ways we are improving in our efforts to protect our mother earth. Recycling is catching on. Factories in many areas have cleaned emissions to the point that the air is almost clean around them. People are aware of the growing pollution of our oceans and of the potentially horrible consequences of ozone layer depletion.

Unfortunately, balancing this are the devastating effects of acid rain, the continued presence all around us of a seemingly infinite stockpile of potentially deadly chemicals and our continued total dependency on petroleum products for our transportation.

The 1990s have dawned with man's first real easing of nuclear fear since Hiroshima. Perhaps this will enable us to confront an even greater threat to human survival. The earth is only partially renewable. In some places we can replant trees and clean the lakes. But in areas that acid rain has destroyed, nothing can grow and the lakes are dead. Vanished species of plants and animals will not return. Lastly, the lost ozone layer cannot be replaced.

We have made great strides in awareness and seem to be making a beginning in correcting our crimes toward our planet.

Perhaps Earth Day 1990 will someday be remembered as a great milestone in our drive to continue the viability of our earth. If not, the lives of generations to come will be the poorer for it.

Spring sports report: More of the same

The National Football League kicks off its 1990 season Sunday with the ever growing controversial collegiate draft.

The draft is under fire from its own graduates with eight players, headed by Green Bay quarterback Don Majkowski, taking the NFL to court demanding an end to the college draft.

They demand an end to any team's control over any player not under contract and an open market plan that says all players not under contract are free to make their own deal.

It's basic marketing. Let the price of the goods be set by the highest bidder.

If it sounds boring, it's only because we fans just went through a similar process between the over-rich entrepreneurs of baseball and their overpaid employees.

Player agreements in the future ought to consider a clause giving fans a full season's break between labor-management-money contract and basic agreement disputes.

The constant money conflict between rich performers and the even richer owners of sports franchises, dealing in sums not even remotely understood in the real world, are offensive to fans and downright destructive to the game in question.

Fans tend to forgive and get on with their holy task of paying for tickets and supporting their team with the greatest of enthusiasm.

Fans' vows to never support the spoiled brats of sports are relatively short lived.

Like sheep, fans are sheared of their patience, ignored and forgotten until ticket selling time, then herded back into the fold in time to spend their real world, hard earned bucks, to make the sportin' enterprise a box office success.

Fans do that. They take all the flack and silly arguments, then forgive and forget. At least they have in the past. But warning signs have been seen and some of the entrepreneurs are getting a little uneasy about fan revolt. You can bet it was a concern among baseball moguls during their recent lockout venture. They heard talk of fan revolt, but they listened to "the fan will be back, as usual," forecasters.

Early attendance figures seem to bear that out. But then opening days always bring fans out to the ol' ball games. Real attendance figures will have to wait for the May and June count.

And you have to be concerned with the player revolt in the NFL. It should be a dandy. The owners have something like $3.66 billion in total television revenue to play with. The players are gonna scratch and grab as much as they can. Don Majkowski and his group have already got the ball rolling with their "free agent" lawsuit. Majkowski and his colleagues may be the first to enter the cash grab arena, but they certainly are not going to be the last.

With all this sportin' money around, you gotta figure the slick dealers of professional boxing are gonna want to play.

Tell me it isn't so, but Don King, Bob Arum and crowd want to stage a Mike Tyson-George Foreman fight this fall. They claim it will be a $100 million fight. With 42-year old George Foreman?

Line up fans. It's time to be sheared again. Baaaa

Public invited to speak at hearings on proposed Edison and SDG&E merger

San Diegans will have their chance to speak out on the proposed merger of Southern California Edison and San Diego Gas and Electric before the state agency which regulates the utilities. Public hearings on the Edison takeover of SDG&E will be held in San Diego by the state Public Utilities Commission on April 23rd at the Shrine Temple, 5440 Kearney Mesa Rd. at 3 p.m. and 7 p.m.

The head of a local utility consumer group says any San Diegan may speak to the Commission about their utility concerns or simply watch the hearings.

"This is the best chance the average person will have to make their views on the proposed merger known. These hearings are for the general public. It's not like many public hearings where people have to sit through hours of testimony by 'experts' before they get a chance to speak," said Michael Shames, Executive Director of UCAN.

"By law the Public Utilities Commission must give great weight to public input on the proposed merger. It's very important that concerned San Diegans attend these hearings," Shames added.

For more information on the public hearings, contact UCAN at 270-7880 or the Public Utilities Commission at 238-2552.

What nerve?

"Carpal Tunnel Syndrome" is a malady I had never heard of until just a few years ago. It must be catching as now everybody and their sister is getting it. The enlarged wrist muscle creates excess pressure on the nerves to the fingers. The result is much discomfort to the fingers, first by going to sleep and then unbearable pain.

At first the doctors diagnosed the disease to be occupation related. I had both wrists operated on for "Carpal Tunnel Syndrome" and the cause was blamed on my many years working as a paperhanger. Although my affliction affected my work but did not affect my favorite hobby, eating, in any way.

First my left hand started going numb during the night. In a few months time it hurt so I couldn't sleep and it prompted my seeking the help of an orthopedic surgeon.

An electric current test was made on my arm and hand to verify the pinched nerve. That particular nerve only affects the thumb and next 2 1/2 fingers. Only 1/2 of the ring finger and all of the little pinky are unaffected.

The surgeon made a short parallel cut, approximately 2 inches long, in my under-wrist which extended into the palm of my hand. This slit exposed the enlarged muscle and pinched nerve. He then fluffed up the pressured nerve to its normal size, removed some of the enlarged muscle and sutured it for a very simple out-patient operation. It was like a miracle to be free of that annoying wrist condition.

About 2 years later the right wrist had to be operated on to correct the same symptoms as the left only this time the correction of a "Trigger Finger" was added to the agenda. A "Trigger Finger" snaps, crackles and pops when you move it up and down. A tiny nodule that has grown on the tendon of that finger has to be removed for smoother movement.

A year ago, my beloved wife Willie Marie, started the same complaints about her fingers going numb and hurting. She couldn't stand it any longer so last fall she too had the same operation as I did on her right hand.

After the right hand healed in a couple of months she recently had the left hand done including a "Trigger Finger" repair on the right hand. What a copy cat! But now she had both hands in bandages. The poor thing was at my mercy to help her. She couldn't even wipe her own nose, so helping her turned out to be great fun. It was my opportunity to pay her back for the many years she has helped me.

If this new affliction is getting more common and the cure is so simple, anyone having the symptoms should look into having the repair made and suffer no longer.

Earth Day celebration

San Diegans are encouraged to participate in a special "Discover Our Earth Day" celebration on the front lawn of the San Diego Natural History Museum on Sunday, April 22nd from 10 a.m.-4 p.m.

The public is invited to bring natural objects such as rocks, fossils, shells, insects and plants for identification by museum scientists. Scientists will also have several specimens on hand representing science departments including botany, paleontology, herpetology, mineralogy, marine invertebrates, birds and mammals, and entomology. Museum docents will answer questions about natural history and display animals close-up. An earth day exhibit will focus on research being conducted by Museum scientists and how it relates to environmental issues and concerns. Children will also have the opportunity to draw a gray whale using the gray whale sculpture by Carl Glowienke in front of the Museum as a model.

The event coincides with an "Earth Fair" in Balboa Park sponsored by the San Diego Earth Day 1990 Coalition. A variety of educational booths will be set up along the Prado sharing the common theme of environmental awareness.

"Discover Our Earth Day" is one of several events planned for "Environment 1990," the Museum's year-long program to increase public awareness of worldwide environmental concerns. The event is free and open to the public. For more information call 232-3821.

Holocaust victims remembered

"Auschwitz will remain as the darkest, cruelest, the most incomprehensible--and yet also the most documented--event in history." So states Elie Wiesel, going on to say, "Thanks to the testimonies of the victims, the confessions of the killers and their accomplices, and the research of historians, we are able to know its essential features. The meticulous preparations for the 'Final Solution' of the Jewish question at the highest level of the Third Reich, the active collaborations of all its ministries, the pernicious role played by Nazi propaganda, by the army, and by Nazi science, the economy, industry, and medicine--anyone who wants to learn the facts needs only to look into the archives. They exist. The effort of the SS to destroy them failed. The enemy did not succeed in erasing the traces of his crimes. Thus he has been defeated in at least one domain, that of remembrance."

With remembrance in mind, the Jewish Community Center College Branch, 4079 54th Street, San Diego, is presenting events to recall and honor "...the voices that were silenced," with prayer, exhibits of photographs and survivor memorabilia, with a rare Holocaust book display, films followed by discussions, music, speakers, and workshops for parents and youth. The San Diego community is cordially invited. For further information, call Mollie Harris at 583-3300.

Joe Freed on the Movies

This week's movie: Crazy People

I went to see this movie for a couple of reasons. First of all, I really like Dudley Moore, although he's made a lot of bad movies since "Arthur"...he was good in them, but they still were bad movies. Secondly, to be honest, I am a crazy person so I figured this was right up my alley.

Moore plays an advertising executive who comes up with a new approach to advertising: honesty. He wants to tell the american consumer the absolute truth. For example, one of his slogans, Jaguar: For Men Who Want To Have Beautiful Women They Hardly Know. And as a reward for his new policies, Moore's company quietly puts him into a mental institution. It is there he meets a wild assortment of crazies and lunatics including Kathy (Daryl Hannah), who quickly becomes his romantic interest.

To his company's surprise, however, Moore's ads become a gigantic hit, bringing his clients millions of dollars in revenues. Suddenly the ad firm wants their crazy genius back and they offer to take him out of the home. But he doesn't want to go, which is understandable. I mean, if you had to choose between a life spent battling in the business world and a life under a shady tree with your head in Daryl Hannah's lap, what would you do? So the firm does the next best thing, they bring the work to him, allowing Moore to work along side his lunatic friends.

"Crazy People," though far-fetched, is a lot of fun, and Moore's ads are hilarious. Unfortunately most of them are unsuitable for printing so you'll have to see for yourself. Moore gives a great performance and may have the film he needs to prove that he's still a strong leading man. Daryl Hannah is pretty good too. Not great, but then her role wasn't written with much substance anyway. She smiles a lot and looks pretty and, sexist though it may be, that was probably her purpose.

The screenplay by Mitch Markowitz is funny, but also has a very lame, trite ending that doesn't measure up to the rest of the film. But I can live with that...the rest is great.

"I Love You To Death"

Dumb. Stupid. Lame. Is this a joke? What a waste. Is it over yet? Boring. Slow. Childish. Give me a break!

You get the idea.

Kites to fly at second citywide kite festival

The Children's Museum will be holding its Second Annual Citywide Kite Festival on Sunday, April 22 from 12-5 p.m. Sponsored this year by the Soup Exchange Restaurants of San Diego County with Big Bear Markets and B-100 Radio, the Kite Festival will be free to the public and will again take place at Embarcadero Marina Park South, adjacent to the San Diego Convention Center.

The Kite Festival will feature a variety of free activities including kite making, family kite flying, precision kite flying demonstrations and bubble magic. Face painting will be available for a nominal fee and soup, salad and nutritious food items will be provided by Soup Exchange restaurants.

The Museum's first Kite Festival, held last April, attracted close to 1,000 people, and this year many more are expected to attend. One of last year's highlights was watching the looks on kids' faces as they tugged on the string of the kite they had just made. This year they can have the same wonderful experience. Richard Loera, a local kite hobbyist and kitemaking instructor, will be back conducting free kite making classes, giving children the opportunity to make and fly their own kites.

Noted children's author to bring Earth Day message at Zoo

A plea for the children of San Diego to join the crusade to save the rain forests is the Earth Day message delivered by award-winning author and artist Lynne Cherry at the San Diego Zoo on Sunday, April 22.

Cherry, whose latest children's book, The Great Kapok Tree, is set in the heart of the Amazon jungle, will meet children to tell stories and show slides of her own experiences in the Brazilian rain forest. Live animals of the region will also be on display during her three presentations at 10 and 11:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. in the Clark Theater in the Children's Zoo.

The Great Kapok Tree will be available for purchase and autographing after each session.

The Earth Day children's presentations are free with admission to the zoo. A free world map, designed and illustrated by Cherry, showing rain forest areas and lushly illustrated with the birds, bugs, mammals and reptiles who call the rain forest home, will be given to all children attending the Earth Day event.

"I hope children will come to see how, like the many raindrops that make up a river, their many voices heard together can convince all nations to preserve their rain forests and convince our own country to leave our national forests intact for future generations," Cherry said.

In The Great Kapok Tree, published by Harcourt Brace Jovanovich in March 1990, Cherry tells of a lone axman who stops to rest while chopping down a mighty rain forest tree. One by one, the myriad creatures who live in the branches and shadows of the great tree come to whisper in the sleeping woodsman's ear, urging him to spare their home and habitat.

The illustrated rain forest maps to be given to children on April 22 are the end papers to Cherry's The Great Kapok Tree.

The Great Kapok Tree is written for children ages 4-8 years, and illustrated to engage children and adult alike.

Moore stars in "I'm Not Rappaport"

If you're in the mood for a delicious meal and exceptional entertainment for only $25 per person, don't miss the Pine Hills Lodge Dinner Theatre production of "I'm Not Rappaport," which opened April 6th.

Co-starring in this season's production is Lemon Grove's own Julian Moore, Community Development Secretary for the City. A talented actor, Julian has performed for five years in a variety of the theatre's productions and visitors to City Hall frequently recognize him from past performances. Julian is especially excited about his challenging role as 'Midge,' opposite Howard Edelman as 'Nat' in "I'm Not Rappaport."

The play is set in Central Park where two elderly men meet on a park bench. They share their diverse histories and philosophies of life as they deal with the effects of aging. The dialogue is hysterically funny, poignant and dramatic, running the gamut of human emotions.

Howard Edelman as Nat (left) and Julian Moore as Midge meet on a park bench in Central Park and discuss their philosophies of life.

Judd Hirsch and Cleavon Little appeared on Broadway in 1985 with this wonderfully creative, fast-paced look at life that was written by Herb Gardner.

The Pine Hills Lodge is in Julian, California. "I'm Not Rappaport" will be showing every Friday and Saturday from April 6th through June 23rd. No Host Cocktails are served at 6:30 p.m., a buffet barbecue dinner is served at 7:00 p.m. and the show starts at 8:00 p.m. Seating is limited, so call for reservations (619) 765-1100. Don't miss dinner and theatre at their finest!!

Kiowa/Caddo Indian to explain powwow etiquette at Lemon Grove Library

Randy Edmonds, nationally-known Indian powwow master of ceremonies, will give a presentation on powwow traditions at the Lemon Grove Library, 8073 Broadway, on Tuesday, April 24, at 7 p.m. Edmonds will explain powwow dances, ceremonies and basic etiquette in this free program for all ages.

Randy Edmonds is the Executive Director of the Indian Human Resource Center in San Diego, and a Kiowa/Caddo Indian from Oklahoma. The powwow, he says, is a gathering of people "to perpetuate the indian traditions and culture."

"We sing traditional songs and do our dances to strengthen the customs and spiritual values of our people," says Edmonds.

Since many tribes have lost their traditions over the years, and since many Indians now live in urban areas, powwows have become "pan-Indian," he adds, incorporating dances and songs from many bands.

"However," Edmonds says, "there is still a customary protocol that most powwows follow."

For instance, many powwows will begin with a blessing of the grounds and a prayer for good fellowship. Then, he says, there will always be the Grand Entry of all the participants, led by the head dancers. Following a salute to the flags, both U.S. and traditional, will be an invocation and introduction of dignitaries and participants, "and then the powwow begins."

Because the public is welcome at Indian powwows, the purpose of Edmonds talk will be to prepare the audience for several upcoming local events (an April 22 gathering at the Golden Hill Recreation Center, a May 12 powwow at Hoover High School, and the San Diego American Indian Cultural Days on May 19-20 in Balboa Park).

The library presentation is part of the County Library's County-wide Libraries and the urban Indian (CLIC) Project, an effort to improve library services to American Indians. Funded by the Federal Library Services and Construction Act Via the California State Library, CLIC brings together a number of public libraries and Indian agencies that serve non-reservation Indians. For further details on this and other Indian-related programs, call 694-3996.
